Freeport Flag Ladies

On Sept. 11, 2001, at 8:45 am, an airplane crashed into the North Tower of the World Trade Center in New York City. Everyone thought it was a tragic accident, including the President of the United States, George W. Bush. President Bush was reading to a group of second grade students in Sarasota, Florida, when a second airplane hit the South Tower of the World Trade Center. At that point, he knew the United States was under attack.

Later that evening, President Bush encouraged all Americans to pray for the families of those who died or were missing following the attacks.

Elaine Greene, Carmen Footer, and JoAnn Miller prepared to join their Freeport, Maine community in a candlelight vigil for the victims. As the three women got ready to leave their home for the event, Elaine stopped to grab an old American flag that was behind their front door. When the women got to their destination, Elaine raised the flag-as motorists honked their horns and people cheered.

Every Tuesday morning, for the next 18 years, (over nine hundred Tuesdays in all) the three women stood on that corner of Main Street in Freeport, waving the American flag as a symbol of loyalty and allegiance to our country.

The women were nicknamed the “Freeport Flag Ladies.” They spoke at schools, met the president, rode in parades and participated in many other things to pass on their love for our country to others. They were happy to do what they could, but by 2019, the women, who ranged in age from 74-83, decided to “retire.”

Wreaths Across America is a nonprofit organization headquartered in Columbia Falls, Maine. When WAA found out the Freeport Flag Ladies were going to retire, they decided to continue the flag waving tradition, and every Tuesday morning, you will find them on U.S. Route 1, in Jonesboro, Maine waving the American Flag!

Wreaths Across America would love for your class to wave the American Flag on Tuesday mornings and share your pictures using the hashtag #AmericaStrong, when posting to social media, please tag the Wreaths Across America Facebook page.
